Samuel Smithers enters his “lab”.

He is greeted by a hungry lizard. Samuel pulls out his phone to check his feeding app. He opens the app and then selects the type of lizard he wishes to feed.

He uses the variety spin wheel tool to help keep things healthy, fun, and interesting for his very hungry lizard.

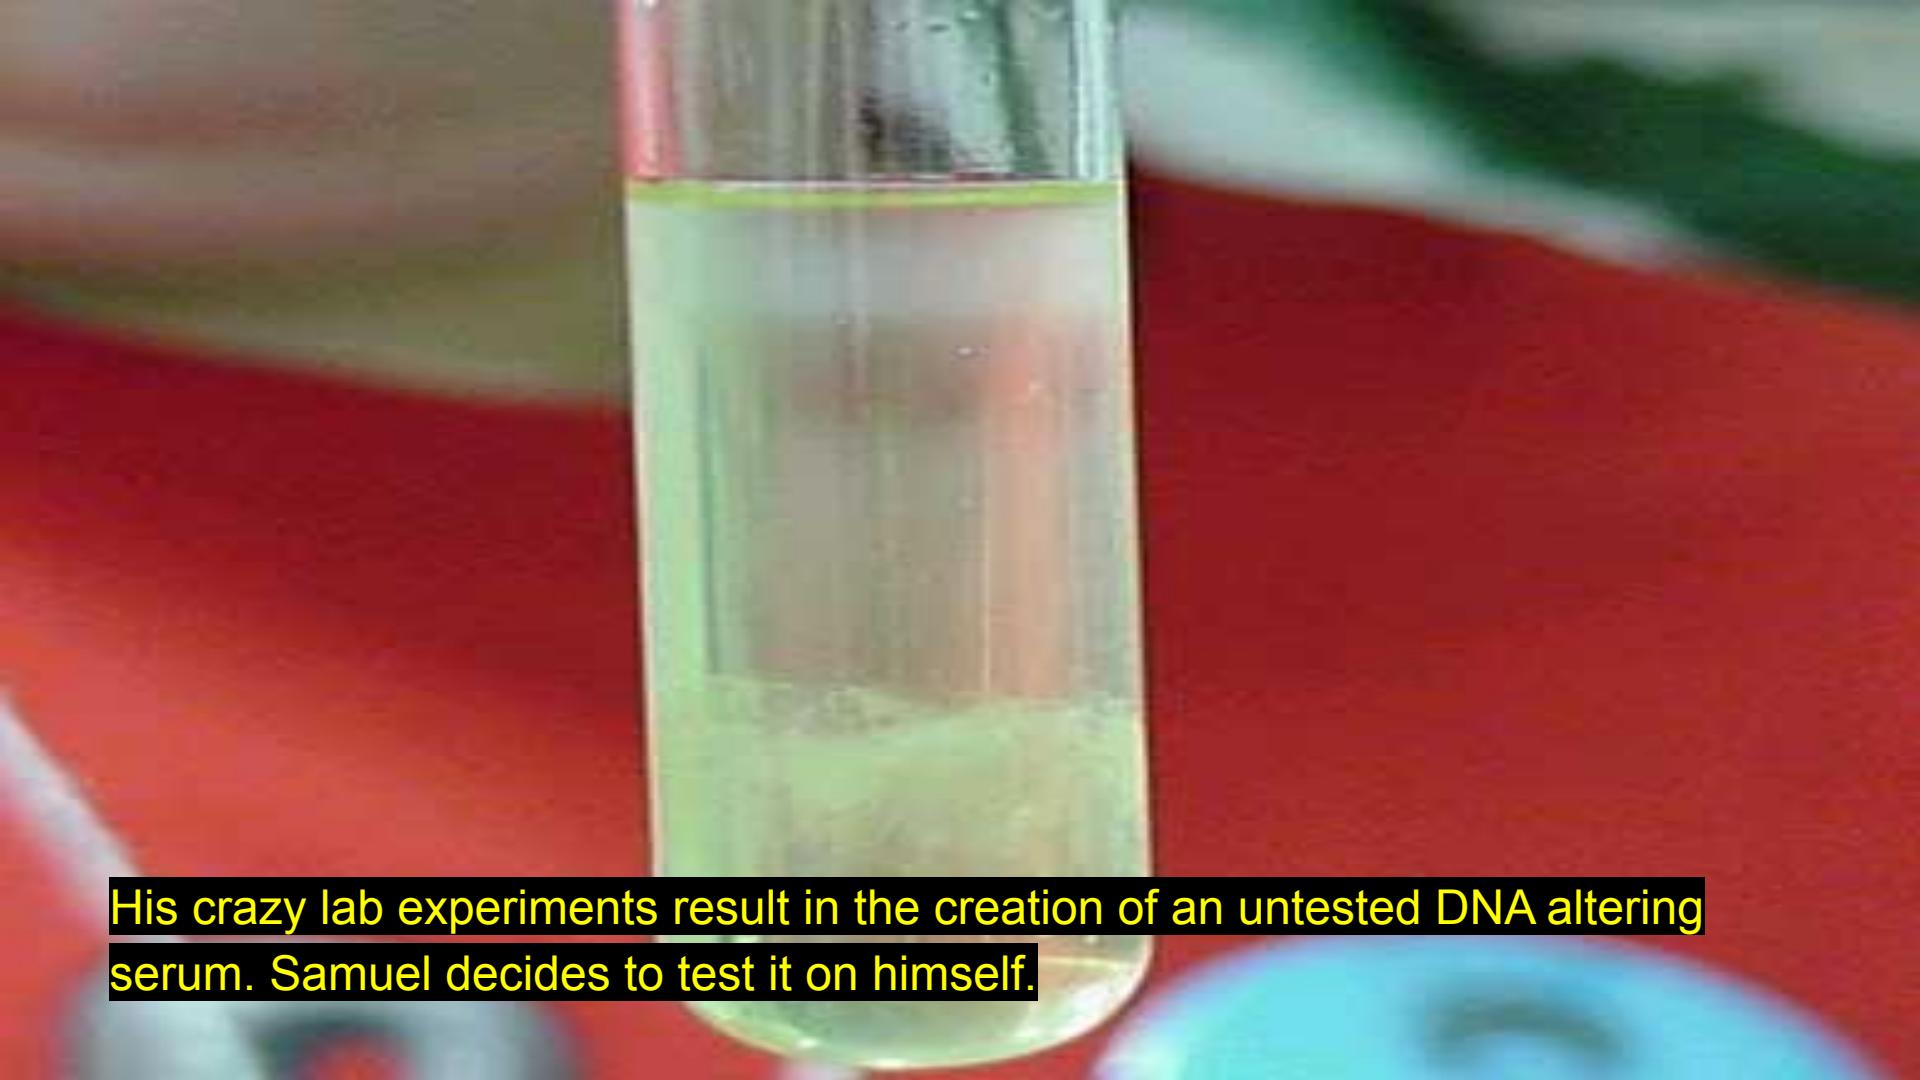

The app alerts him and sends out a reminder to dust his feeders with calcium and reptile vitamins.

Samuel then feeds his lizard the dusted insects. The lizard grows healthier and stronger.

Samuel then returns to his kooky lab experiments.

His crazy lab experiments result in the creation of an untested DNA altering serum. Samuel decides to test it on himself.

Samuel mutates into a freakish reptilian dude and then runs away to hide in the local swamp lands.

Richard comes back from work, stressed and on the verge of overdosing. He realizes that he needs to feed his newly acquired komodo dragon.

The issue is that Cooper is unsure of what pet he should choose. His parents are starting to get impatient, but luckily Cooper's older brother, Mark, has just the solution.

Mark recently discovered a new app on his phone that can categorize reptiles into how high maintenance they are to take care of.

Cooper talks about it with his brother and his parents, then decides on getting a pet gecko.

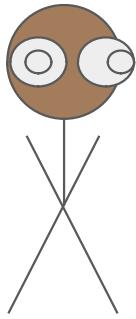

The next day Cooper's family goes to the pet store. They pick the gecko that Cooper wants, but another issue arises. They don't know what to feed the gecko or what environment is best suited for the gecko.

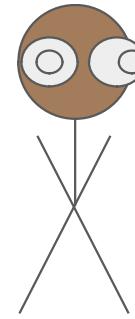

Luckily, Mark is there to save the day once again, with his newly installed app. The app is able to give Cooper the specific dietary needs for geckos as well as the best habitats for them.

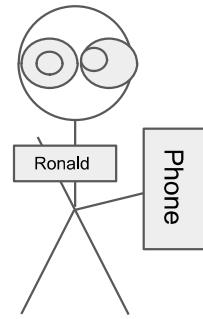

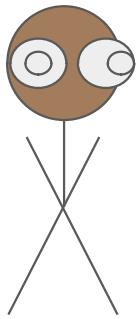

Cooper is then able to head home with his new pet gecko. His parents also feel at ease, knowing that their new pet will be healthy and that their son will be happy.

Jay's nephew, Ronald, tells him about an app that lets him find and deliver food for the reptiles at his zoo

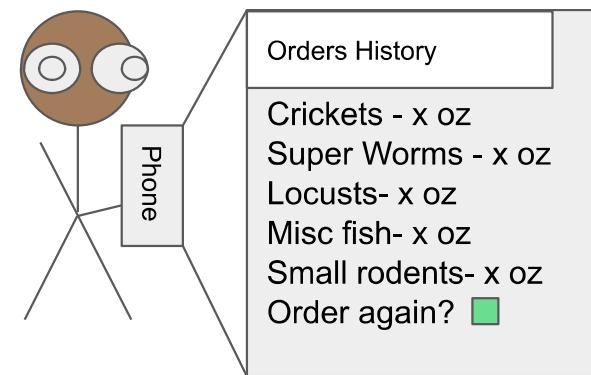

Because Ronald knows that Jay is terrible with technology because of his age, Ronald tells him that "it's easier to use than the plants I gave you"

Jay looks through the application and finds the easy to use buttons lets him not struggle with technology

Jay sees that he can make an order with custom made ingredients

And his last order can be pulled up and ordered again. Jay is finally able to relax and get the food he needs at the click of a button

Bearded Dragon

Enclosure

This is where information from experienced Bearded Dragon owners would go, in this case based on proper housing info.

After he inputs his species of lizard, he's given information based on what he needs, in this case he's given housing information so that he can confirm that he has the optimal setup for his pet so that it doesn't get depressed or upset.

Now Robert Johnson is happy because he finally has a cool pet and knows how to take care of him properly. He finally has a cure to his loneliness and even has a new cold-blooded reptile in his life.
